Third FOW report is here! If we are catching you on your well deserved holiday, save it in your files and maybe use it for when you get back and reconnect with your team.

For this 3rd edition, we focused on data and new ideas to make your work spaces more wellbeing focused. Plus, do watch our conversation with HR Talk series.

FOW data of the week

Romania is the European country where people increased their working numbers the most during the last 5 years, according to a OECD study. Yeay or nay? More about the study here.

The digital HQ

It is now the center of the company; it's the technology underpinning your company in terms of operation, output, and culture. In a digital-first, post-pandemic world, the physical office is no longer the key place that people connect. Read more about the digital HQ on our FOW infused blog.

What is Bleisure?

As temperatures soar, we are introducing a hot topic on FOW: "bleisure", the blend of business and travel, a term coined back in 2009. According to Fortune magazine, for advocates, bleisure can help revitalise the struggling business travel industry from the pandemic's impact. Read more here.

Biophilic design

We create our hubs with as much biophilic and wellbeing centric principles we can. Smart lighting system adaptable during the day, plants, use of natural construction materials. Work Retreat co-working hubs are productivity, collaboration and creativity enhancers. How adapted is your office space to biophilic principles?

A fruitful conversation about the Future of Work

Here is our team in a recent online talk about Future of Work and how we designed Work Retreat for the benefit of teams and professionals. Watch the episode of HR Talk series here. Thanking 4CAREER for facilitating this.
